On the 24th, the highest in the match so far, had been taken, the whole being valued at about £20. The man who had taken the ball out of the place; but they secured no cash, as all the money had been taken out of it by Mr. Christie on Friday night.

A gambler named Michael O'Connell, 40 years of age, residing at 112 Hargrave-street, met with a fatal accident on Saturday night. While driving down Bridge-street he was struck by a horse and thrown on his head, and received injuries which necessitated his removal to the Sydney Hospital. Dr. Armstrong, who attended him, found that he was suffering from a fracture of the skull and a wound on the left cheek, and five stitches in a wound on the forehead. The little finger of his left hand was dislocated, and the man complained of an injury to his back.

Information was conveyed to the City Coroner on Saturday morning that a young married woman named Hannah Flaherty, who resided with her husband at 112 Hargrave-street, had died on the previous day from the effects of poison. An inquest was accordingly held, and the evidence showed that the woman, who was only 23 years of age, was taken ill on Monday last. Dr. Russell was called to see her and prescribed for her, and she became somewhat better. Towards the end of the week, however, she seemed to become sicker in her manner, and on Friday her husband, who was at work, sent for her. When he arrived at his home, his wife said she had been taken ill, and then she died. Dr. Russell was called to see her, and he found her dead. He was unable to find out the cause of death, and a verdict to that effect was returned, the jury adding that the poison was taken while the woman was suffering from delirium caused by influenza.

QUEENSLAND MEAT.

LONDON, JAN. 29.

A banquet was given at the Hotel Metropole, London, last night by Mr. Weddell, of Messrs. W. Weddell and Co., agents for the Central Queensland Meat Export Company, with the view of introducing the company's meat to the public.

Sir J. F. Garrick, Agent-General for Queensland, presided, and there was a large company present, including Sir Robert Herbert, lately Permanent Under-Secretary to the Colonial Office; the Hon. R. H. Meade, assistant Under-Secretary to the Colonial Office; Colonel French and Colonel McLean of the War Office; Messrs. R. Gray, Oscar de Satge, E. M. Young, Hodgson, and Haslam.

General Willis, who was also present, expressed the hope that the proposed frozen meat deposits for the British troops would be extended to India and Hongkong. He was convinced that Australian meat would be better and cheaper than the existing rations supplied to the troops.

Captain Rice, of Her Majesty's Navy, stated that the establishment of frozen meat depots would certainly tend to increase the defensive resources of the empire.

Sir Robert Herbert said he feared that compulsory labelling of Australian frozen meat was impossible. He advised the company to open numerous stores for the exclusive sale of colonial meat, and said it would be necessary to instruct the public as to the best methods of thawing. Even the Australian meat provided at the banquet might have been better treated.

Referring to political affairs in Queensland, Sir Robert Herbert said that the retirement of Sir Samuel Griffith from political life would be a grave loss to Australia and to federation. It was easier to obtain judges than statesmen of the Griffith calibre.
